Experian's approach to Monthly Active User (MAU) fees, is that regardless of the number events which an end user triggers then there is a single chargeable count for that end user. As such there is no financial cost for clients who wish to have multiple triggers at different places on their website / mobile app, thereby triggering more events for the same end-users – equally returning customers will not incur additional charges within the same month. This approach allows clients to plan far more accurately to their expected costs and not have to ration their deployments.

Experian retains the right to waive One-time setup and/or Annual fees at their discretion.
