Who might be a user of this service?

Public service organisations might want to use business data for contacting UK businesses, for planning purposes, to understand current trends and for so much more.

Below is a list of examples of why public services might need to use Market Location's data:

- A government department wants to understand current trends on the high street – how many businesses are opening and closing,
- A Council wants to establish if they should be charging business or domestic tariffs to an individual that operates a business from home,
- A government department needs to plan for an infrastructure or transportation upgrade and needs numbers and details of businesses that are close to the potential new transport hub or upgraded infrastructure
- A public body needs to communicate with small businesses around financial activity deadlines,
- A public body needs to communicate to all businesses about a legislative, regulatory or code of practice change,
- A public body wishes to invite relevant business owners into government forum. For example communicating with all agricultural UK businesses or other related sectors,
- A public body wishes to establish how many businesses are online,
- A public body requires to establish Foundational Economy suppliers in a locality,
- A public body wishes to build a better understanding of trading sites as opposed to incorporated businesses.

marketlocation G-Cloud 14 Service Definition

Business related information such as contact details, location and financial indicators, changes at a rate of over 30% every year. That means that every day thousands of changes are occurring to businesses across the UK – so without due care and attention, the value of data can reduce significantly over time. The information that a business holds on its customers and prospects is one of its most precious assets but it requires work, diligence and expertise to ensure it remains an asset and doesn't rapidly become a burden.

Key Database Characteristics:

- Full UK coverage
- 1.7 million records
- 2 million contact details
- 1.4 million email addresses
- Fully telephone verified
- Range of SIC and Market Sector Codes
- 100% include telephone number
- Employee size – full coverage
- Financial information
- A range of premium data products including:
 - Specialist Decision Makers
 - Brand New Businesses
 - Businesses on the Move

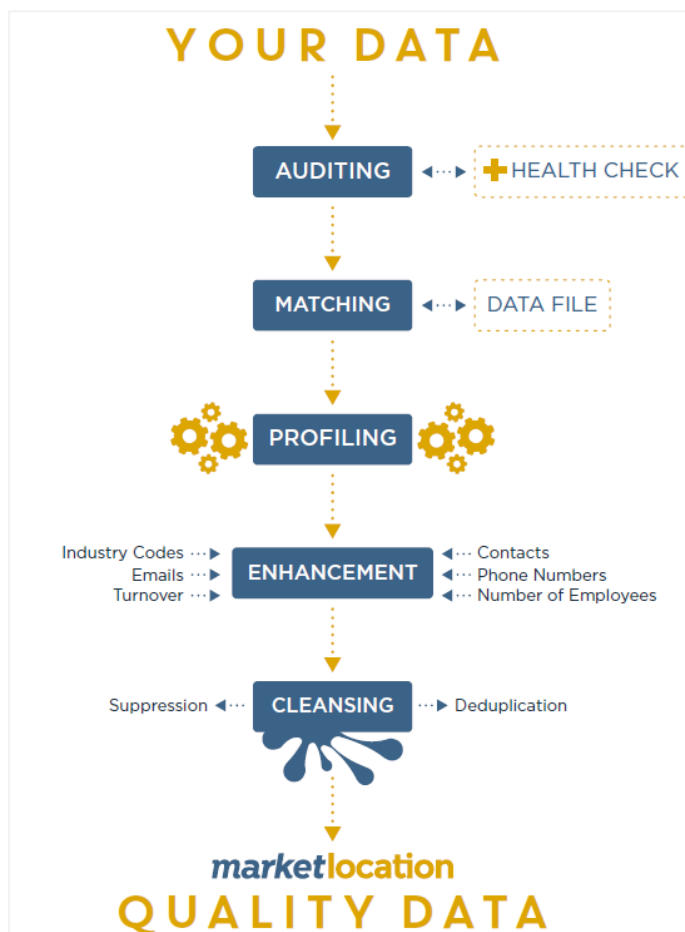

Data Quality is at the Heart of What We Do

The information that a business holds on its customers and prospects is one of its most precious assets.

However, business related information (such as contact details, location and financial indicators) is estimated to change at a rate of around 30% every year. That's hundreds of thousands of pieces of information that go out of date every day. In addition to the issue of declining data quality, there is also the problem that customer data is probably held across a variety of different systems, being input by a variety of personnel. This often results in data that is incomplete, inaccurate or duplicated.

Why does this happen?

Different areas of a business have different priorities - the information that is important for Finance is different from what's important to Sales. The result is a database that very quickly becomes unwieldy, difficult to manage and hard to benefit from. At Market Location we are dedicated to the process of updating, maintaining and growing our UK business database which can be leveraged to reduce these complex data quality issues.
