Mobileye's pricing is based on the type of safety or driver-assistance technology a customer needs and how it will be used.

Instead of fixed, off-the-shelf prices, Mobileye provides customised quotes depending on the hardware, software, and level of intelligence required for each deployment.

For example, basic driver-safety features, advanced driver-assistance systems, and autonomous-ready solutions each involve different components and integration work, so costs vary accordingly.

Organisations normally pay per vehicle for the hardware plus access to software features, data services, and ongoing support.

This flexible model ensures customers pay only for the capabilities they actually need, whether outfitting a small fleet or rolling out advanced safety technology across an entire organisation.
