WAF - Application Security

WAF - Application Security

WAFs monitor and filter HTTP/HTTPS traffic between web applications and the internet, inspecting each request and response for signs of malicious activity. They use various techniques, including signature-based detection, behavior analysis, and machine learning algorithms, to identify and block suspicious requests while allowing legitimate traffic to pass through.

Benefits include

- Protection from common cybersecurity attacks
- WAFs help mitigate vulnerabilities in web applications
- Data loss prevention
- Compliance with regulatory requirements such as PCI
- DSS, HIPAA, GDPR
- Improved web application performance and availability
- Real-time threat intelligence
- WAFs offer granular control and customization over security policies

WAF Features

Real-time threat intelligence

Empower your organisations to stay ahead of evolving cyber threats by providing timely and actionable insights into emerging attack vectors, vulnerabilities, and malicious activities.

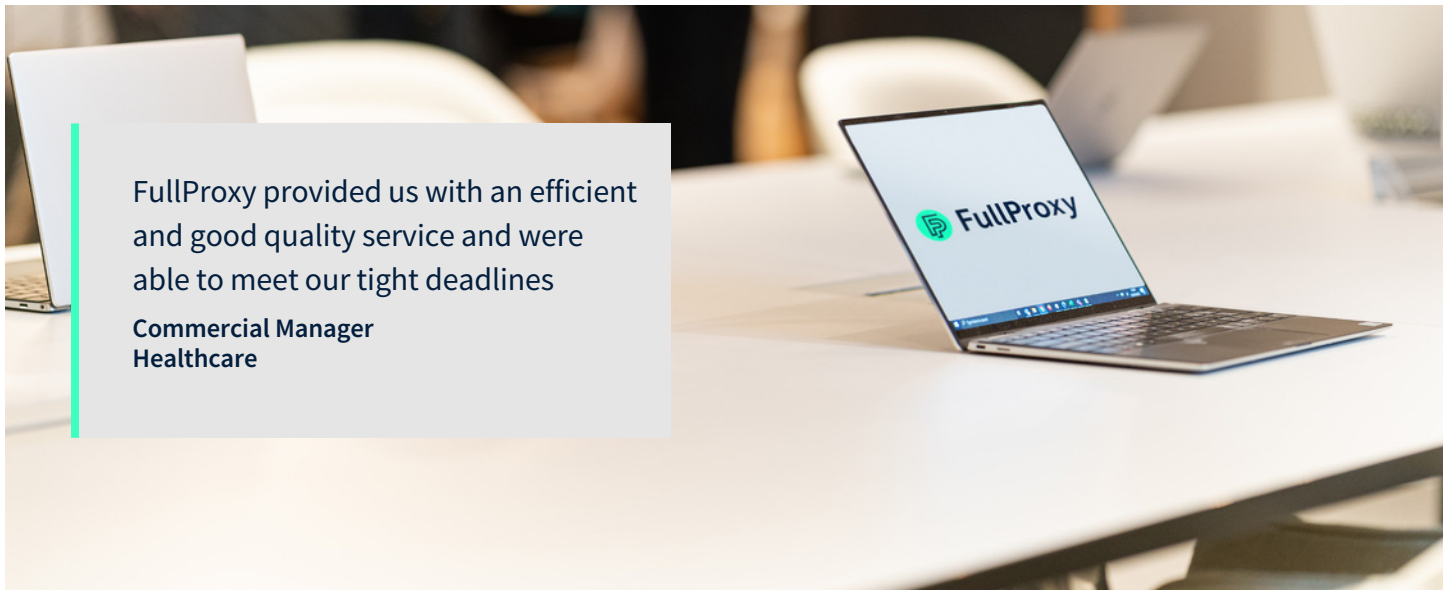

Granular control and customisation over security policies

Tailor your cyber security measures precisely to your unique risk profiles, compliance requirements, and operational needs, ensuring an optimised balance between security and operational efficiency.

Data loss prevention

Safeguard sensitive information by monitoring, detecting, and preventing the unauthorised transfer or exfiltration of confidential data, mitigating the risks of data breaches, regulatory non-compliance, and reputational damage.
