

Data Protection Officer (DPO) as a Service

Ensure regulatory compliance and meet industry best practice on a continuous basis by outsourcing your DPO role to Bridewell. Our highly-accredited and experienced data privacy practitioners can take full ownership of your organisation's data privacy activities to simplify processes, reduce risk and comply with legislation.

Common Challenges

Shortage of Suitable Data Privacy Experts

It is challenging to hire and retain a DPO with the experience and qualifications necessary to lead an organisation's current data privacy function.

Lack of Independence From Other Business Functions

Having an in-house DPO can often result in a lack of independence from other business functions, which creates a conflict of interest in exercising the mandatory duties.

Regulatory Challenges

Inexperienced DPOs may be unfamiliar with relevant regulatory frameworks and unable or unaware of how to achieve compliance.

Lack of Resource within In-house Teams

In-house teams may be burdened with day-to-day activities that prevent them from reviewing overall strategy and can become overly reliant on their inhouse DPO which can reduce resilience if or when they are unavailable.

How Bridewell Can Help

Optimised Data Privacy Strategy

Adopt a bespoke, best-practice approach to data privacy while Bridewell takes full ownership of its implementation.

Guaranteed Regulatory Compliance

Bridewell's consultants are experts in applicable data privacy legislation, including GDPR, DPA, CCPA, LGPD, PECR and can operate independently according to EDPB guidelines.

Coordination Across All Data-Related Activity

Bridewell will co-ordinate mandatory activities from providing support with Data Privacy Impact Assessments, co-ordinating responses to data subjects rights requests, investigating breaches, training and more.

An Extension of Your Team

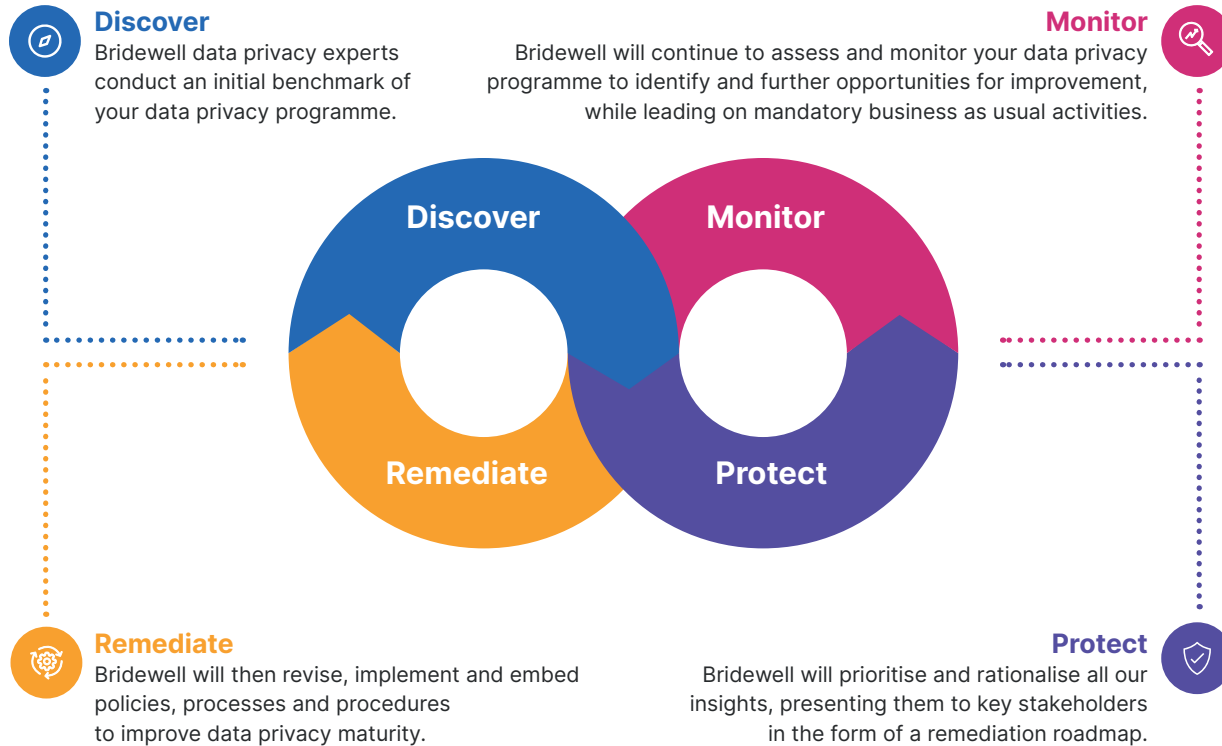

If your organisation already has an acting DPO, Bridewell's experts can function as integrated part of your team that function as an additional resource to support the existing role.
