Overview of G-Cloud Service

NEC Redact allows users to leverage AI capabilities to automatically identify information within documents that are candidates for redaction. The types of information that can be automatically identified include:

Once the information that has been identified for redaction and presented to the user, they are able to confirm the decisions or change them. A PDF is then produced with the identified information redacted.

NEC Redact has a user-friendly interface that allows users to upload, process and redact all their documents quickly with minimal training. Using artificial intelligence, personal information is automatically identified and suggested for redaction, saving time and reducing the risk of missing information.
