Document AI in EMIS-X

AI-powered tools that speed up document processing and reduce administrative workload in primary care.

Service overview

Primary care teams are handling an ever-growing volume of clinical documents, while the time needed to interpret information, apply coding and complete follow-up actions is also increasing. Practices need intelligent tools that simplify key steps, speed up processing and help ensure important information is not missed.

Document AI is a set of intelligent tools within EMIS-X® that helps clinical teams review documents more quickly and accurately. It works alongside existing workflows to surface the right information at the right time, reducing manual effort and supporting safer, more consistent decision-making.

The service supports clinical review by suggesting accurate and relevant clinical codes, highlighting key information and generating concise summaries that draw attention to important details and recommended next steps. This helps clinicians understand document content at a glance and make faster, more confident decisions.

Routine tasks can also be automated for user approval, reducing administrative burden and helping teams focus on work that requires clinical judgement. By combining intelligent recommendations with human oversight, Document AI supports more efficient document processing and improves the flow of information across services.

Key benefits

- Save time with faster clinical document review.
- Improve accuracy through intelligent coding suggestions.
- Make faster decisions using concise, actionable summaries.
- Reduce administration by automating routine clinical actions for user approval.
