Node Pricing:

“Node” means a server or virtual machine that runs Cloudera Product and consists of no more than 16 Cores, 128 GB RAM and 48 decimal terabytes (TB) of storage (the “Node Limitations”).

If Customer exceeds its Node Limitations set forth in an Order Form, Customer will be required to pay additional variable fees at Cloudera’s then-current standard list pricing calculated according to the additional quantity of Cores, RAM and TB on each Node purchased.

Variable compute and storage is applied to all CDP-PVC-Base pricing.

The variable compute and storage uplift is determined by comparing the amount of compute and storage in a customer’s environment to a baseline compute and storage cap of 16 Cores, 128GB RAM and 48TB of addressed storage per node pooled across an entire cluster or environment.

Compute-Based Licensing: CDP Private Cloud Base is licensed per Cloudera Compute Unit (CCU) and Cloudera GPU Unit (CGU). A CCU consists of 1Core and 8 GBs of RAM. CGUs are based on the type of GPU and number of GPUs running on a given cluster.

Storage Licensing: CDP Private Cloud Base also includes storage per terabyte for both HDFS and Ozone/Third-Party Storage

Cloudera CDP versions which have gone beyond their published service date, i.e. those which are "end of life" will require Extended Support SKUs

CDP Private Cloud Data Services is licensed per Cloudera Compute Unit (CCU) and Cloudera GPU Unit (CGU).

CCU Pricing:

“Data Under Management” means the total amount of data (measured in Terabytes), including structured data, semi-structured data, unstructured data, and metadata, which Cloudera Products are configured, programmed or otherwise setup to access, even if such data originates from or resides on a system or product not provided by Cloudera.

“Capacity Under Management” means the total Usable Capacity allocated to one or more Storage Volumes used by the Cloudera Products, measured in Terabytes. This includes any storage used by Cloudera Products even if residing on a third-party storage system. For purposes of this definition, (a) “Usable Capacity” means the total amount of bytes available to be written after a system or device has been formatted for use, excluding storage space set aside for system use, RAID parity, over-provisioning (i.e., headroom for garbage collection) and similar, and (b) “Storage Volume” means a single accessible storage area within a single file system.

“Cloudera Compute Unit” or “CCU” means a combination of Cores and RAM. The number of CCU for a “Node” is calculated as the sum of the number of cores divided by six and the amount of memory (in GB) divided by 12.
