Diary Studies

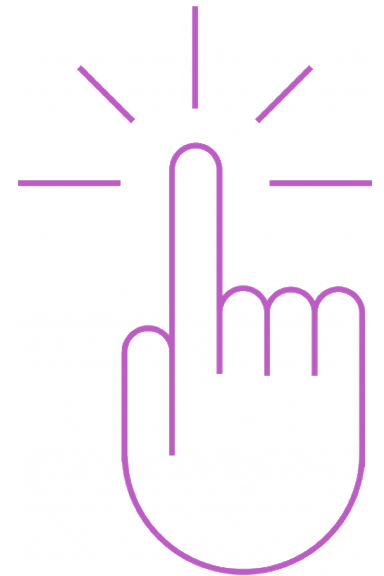

When is it right for you?

In today's multi-connected world, decisions are generally made across multiple touchpoints, on various devices and often through discussions with friends and family.

In order to capture your user behaviours, activities, and experiences, across all of this, we recommend a Diary Study.

In a Diary Study, data is self-reported by participants over a period of time, logging specific information about their experiences, thoughts and interactions as they go.

This means that we gather insights as they happen, rather than through recall!

Diary Studies

Features and benefits

A remote research method used to understand how your users behave, act and experience your service/app over a period of time. Diary Studies capture your users' thoughts in the moment, removing the need for recall, capturing emotions and intent as they occur.

Features

- Log the thoughts/experiences about a product, process or activity
- Capture real-world environment usage over a period of time
- Engage with respondents through the platform
- Monitored by our User Experience (UX) experts
- Collect text, pictures, audio clips from your users
- Gathers data for creating informed customer journey maps
- Duration is configurable

Benefits

- Feedback is gathered instantly
- Capture information often missed during recall
- Users feel part of a community
- Users can respond individually or react to other participants comments
- Longitudinal insights
- Probe further when interesting insights arise
