

Application Portfolio Assessment

ASPIRE

Typical customer challenges that can be addressed by our application portfolio assessment

Lack of visibility into the application landscape:

Many organisations don't have a clear inventory of all their applications. Our assessment provides a consolidated view of applications, including cost, usage, technical health, and business value.

High IT costs from redundancy and inefficiency:

Duplicate or overlapping applications drive unnecessary license, maintenance, and support costs. Our assessment identifies redundant systems and highlights opportunities for consolidation or elimination.

Technology risk and obsolescence:

Legacy applications may rely on unsupported technologies, outdated security, or lack of vendor support. Our assessment highlights risk factors (end-of-life tech, compliance issues, security vulnerabilities) to prioritise remediation.

Misalignment with business strategy:

Applications may not support current or future business goals. Our assessment scores applications based on business value, ensuring IT investments align with strategic objectives.

Poor performance and user dissatisfaction:

Some applications may be slow, unreliable, or underused. Our assessment collects usage and performance metrics to flag low-value or poorly performing apps.

Barriers to digital transformation and modernisation:

Legacy or monolithic systems can slow down cloud adoption, automation, and innovation. Our assessment identifies modernisation candidates and supports cloud migration or re-platforming strategies.

Fragmented integration and data silos:

Applications that don't integrate well create inefficiencies and inconsistent data. Our assessment reveals integration gaps and helps streamline enterprise architecture.

Inefficient resource allocation:

IT staff may spend too much time supporting low-value apps instead of driving innovation. Our assessment helps rationalise the portfolio, freeing resources for higher-value initiatives.
